Candace Jarade

My name is Candace and I am a co-chair of the SHSMUN '20 Crisis Committee. Chairing will be an interesting experience for me, especially as it will be a change from my previous two years as a delegate. I have also been an active member of the CC as a participant in the CC Head Quarters for two consecutive years now, so I am more than familiar with the committee flow and environment. Personally I find the Crisis Committee unique because the diplomats have to come up with convincing arguments on their feet while maintaining international diplomacy and working collaboratively with their co-diplomat. What MUN has taught me is that young people have the power to understand serious global issues, and that we have the agency to create change. I will ensure to the best of my ability that every participant in the committee will leave the conference feeling accomplished, confident, and hopeful for the future.

Alex Juvelekian

Hi, I'm Alex Juvelekian, and I am a co-chair of the SHSMUN '20 Crisis Committee. My journey in MUN has been a very smooth one so far, taking part in over 6 national conferences and gathering a few awards here and there. However, since the beginning of my journey, my goal while heading into a conference has never been all about getting an award. I won't lie and say awards were the least of my concern, but I always saw conferences as a way of learning how to communicate with delegates and work with them. In other words, I believe the social skills and friendships acquired from conferences are more important than the awards themselves. Aside from MUN, I try to make time for activities after study hours, although I haven't really stuck to a specific sport in a while. Finally, I'd like to say I'm looking forward to seeing you at the conference, as I'm sure you will enjoy it.

Chloe Ghaleb

From a young age, I was drawn to debate and public speaking, and consistently participated in clubs and activities related to such subject matters. When the opportunity first arose for me to participate in MUN in 10th Grade, I was quick to join. I was happy to have an outlet where my passion for debate and public speaking could be combined with world affairs through educational, creative, and enjoyable means. In just short of a year, I've participated and won awards in multiple national and international conferences. I'm excited to channel this MUN experience into my duties as a Chair. My focus will be to be helpful, fair, and to ensure everyone enjoys and takes something away from this conference. Outside of MUN, my hobbies include playing piano, skiing, reading, writing, and traveling. I'm looking forward to the upcoming conference, and hope to see this Crisis Committee session as both productive and memorable.
